In recent years several studies have been made to determine the factors that influence learning in various fields. One of the first experiments carefully worked out upon this subject was the study of learning of telegraphy by Bryan and Harter. Their work was based upon the information gained by questioning about two hundred operators, upon reports from schools of telegraphy, and upon the records of individuals that were studying the subject. Two of these individuals were tested weekly from the time they began to practice until they had attained a fair degree of ability as operators. With a third person, the tests commenced about six weeks after he had begun the practice. He was tested weekly on his ability to receive, first, letters not making words; second, letters making words but the words not making sentences;...
