Some have had slight mention in the daily papers, but many have done wonderful work without any notice whatever. The noble men, women and children who have been so self-sacrificing should have first place in our hearts and in the hearts of future generations, and how can we know them unless we are told of them? It is needless to say that all Houston was glad of an opportunity to help. All true Americans feel that it was a just cause, and we are glad that our Country and our President is the worlds champion Peace Maker. On the morning of April 6, 1917, the citizens of Houston, Texas, were up early (much earlier than usual), every man, woman and child in the city were eager to see the paper. America had entered the World War. America was needed across the water. Every heart throbbed and every eye was dim. For many months we had been working strenuously at the Red Cross, hundreds of boxes of hospital garments and surgical dressings had been shipped across the water. We had been giving what we thought was the best we had, we were sending our flour and sugar. We were denying ourselves of many luxuries to help our neighbors in the Old World, but now the call was greater, we were to give our men! Houston was not lacking in Patriotism....
