Not illustrated. 1881 Excerpt: .We may therefore regard a point on the traversing bar as describing the locus, and since the extremities of the links which rotate describe exceptional loci, we will suppose the describing point different from these. The locus described is evidently symmetrical about the line of centres. Moreover, since the circular points are triple points, and there are three double points on the line of centres, we must, in order to have a unicursal curve, have on this line a contact of two branches whose common tangent is perpendicular to the line of centres. For we cannot have four double points on the line of centres identically, nor one double point finitely distant from that line; since, then, there would be another double point on the other side of it. Now, taking A as origin, and the line of centres as the axis of x (see figure), we...
